The Players: Ron Tanski, vocals, piano; Noah Tanski, drums; Sherman Allen, guitar.

Material: Full of blues, a touch of soul with hints of rock & roll, Ron Tanski's material is original and captivating. His lyrics are like conversations in which he talks with the audience rather than at them. Great energy and vibes, Tanski's music stretches the length of the musical rainbow, covering every mood, from melancholy to upbeat and happy to straightforward and serious. While Tanski's sound is not unlike other blues artists, the underlying difference is that he makes the listener believe he is straight out of the "Big Easy."

Musicianship: Tanski has the uncanny ability to sound like a true bluesman while his appearance gives the opposite impression. His voice is deep, raspy and edgy, producing just the right amount of grit. He also embodies mad artistry on the piano, fingers buoyantly moving across the keys, filled with intensity and passion. Drummer Noah Tanski is as cool and smooth as ice, mesmerizing to the eyes and alluring to the ears. Allen cranks out the riffs on his Gibson guitar, dancing with blues and soul, conveying a sound that is unmistakable.

Performance: Connected with the crowd and keyed in on the emotion of the room, Ron Tanski had few issues with his performance. A bit more movement from everyone involved could have spiced the whole scene up, but that's nothing a little Red Bull wouldn't cure. These three amigos gelled together as if they'd been playing with one another for years, spurring out tune after tune, moving seamlessly from one song to the next like a reader turns the page of a good book.

Ron Tanski: A blues rock artist that connects with the crowd using a talented backing band.

Summary: A great blues band that catches your attention from the beginning and strives the whole performance to hold it. Anyone searching for soul, jazz, blues and light rock, look no further—all can be heard in a set by this snappy trio.

—Tom Laurie
